

SOGECLAIR awarded a five-years frame contract to supply engineering services to all Airbus divisions worldwide.

SOGECLAIR, a leading technological supplier to the transportation industry global segment, has been selected by Airbus as a strategic supplier to provide services in engineering, manufacturing engineering and customer services. This referencing is branded by Airbus EMES3: Engineering, Manufacturing Engineering & Services Strategic Suppliers. It comes with a multi-year frame contract.

Along with our 10-years partner Belcan, our alliance, the longest lasting one in this area, has been recognized once more as being able to support Airbus to address the future technological, environmental and industrial challenges which lie ahead of our industry.

Philippe Robardey, President and CEO of SOGECLAIR group, notices “The EMES3 frame contract represents at the same time a bold recognition of the value and support which SOGECLAIR has been providing to Airbus all along these years and a great opportunity to extend our services and support for Airbus”.

The EMES3 award allows indeed SOGECLAIR to address new areas of activities such as manufacturing engineering and customer services. These new perimeters are directly concerned by some of the greatest challenges of the aerospace industry such as decarbonation or defense virtualization

We intend to bring our innovation spirit and capacity to tackle the status quo in order to support the aerospace and space sectors to succeed in the challenges of developing more sustainable and efficient products in the very next future. Philippe Robardey added “Our strength of being concurrently a high end services (50% of our revenues) and industrial supplier (50% of our revenues) will be all the more relevant in this renewed and extended perimeter, allowing SOGECLAIR to bring its added-values to Airbus throughout the entire end-to-end products cycle”.
